

DIFFERENCES IN ADOLESCENCE

DIRECTIONS: Conduct an interview with a parent or guardian and either make notes or record the information via audio. Ask the type of questions that might bring a mutual understanding of a teenager's concerns. Below are a few of the types of questions you should ask. Ask each question below and record the answers. You must also create 3-5 questions of your own.

QUESTIONS:

1. When were you allowed to start driving? How often were you allowed to use the car? Did you ever have an accident?

2. Who were your high school friends? What kinds of activities did you do for entertainment?

3. When did you start dating? What traits were most important to you in a boyfriend/girlfriend?

4. Did you have a curfew? What time was your curfew?

5. Did you have a role model? What traits did you admire most about him/her?

6. How did you go about making decisions about jobs, college, housing, etc?

CREATE YOUR OWN QUESTIONS (use the top line to record the question and the remainder of the space to record the answers):

7. _____

8. _____

9. _____

10. _____

11. _____

