

Change in communication

By Isabel, Taylor and Sarah

Introduction

- Communication has evolved so quickly over the years, just a few years ago phones were the size of bricks and for texting it would take forever to text a sentence or two and now today it takes seconds to call and text someone. Today we are going to be talking to you about communication and how it's changed over the few years.

Communicating before

- Before we had all of these fancy new ways of communicating with people off of our devices these are some of the ways people communicated before.
- Letters, Landline phones, Messengers and Telegrams- telegrams was a machine that typed messages in one location and then sent to a different location. It would only let you send a limited amount of words in a given period of time.

Communication

Good

Bad

Bad Texting

- Texting can be a bad change because it sometimes can distract us from our activities. It distracts us from the world when we text and drive and take our eyes off the road which is very dangerous And can lead to very serious accidents like injuries or even death.

Texting and Driving Statistics

- 1600000 accidents are caused each year because of texting and driving.
- 25% of all car accidents are caused by texting and driving.
- Texting while driving distracts u for at least 5 seconds each time and when your going 60kmh that's about 83 meters of driving without looking at the road.

Bad Texting

- Texting can also distract us when we are with our friends and families and can take away quality time together.
- It also can take us away from important moments in our life.

Good Texting

- Texting is also a good change because it has made it a lot easier to communicate with your friends and family when they are away from you
- Good texting is sending an occasional text or if you get lost or in trouble texting immediately becomes okay. It's also when you can stop yourself from texting if you are in a conversation with someone, driving, in class, etc.

Conclusion

- In conclusion we think that communication is one of the biggest changes that has happened because without all the technological innovations that happened for communication we wouldn't be able to talk to someone across the world and share as much information. The change to communication is permanent because it is for the better and there would be no point of it changing to how it was back then. We think that the change is good for society because its very helpful in many ways.
