

Joseph loved to punish the immoral.	He destroyed any mutant that came in his way.	One day, he came upon a mutated horse.
"[Joseph] was a man of local consequence" (Wyndham, 6).	"Offences [are] blasphemies" (Wyndham,6).	"God never made horses the size of these" (Wyndham, 13)
Joseph argued that the horses should not be put to use.	From that moment, Joseph disagreed with anyone who ought to believe that mutants should live.	Joseph became... the Annihilator
"[Who] could pass creatures like that..." (Wyndham, 14).	"Regain the high place in which, as the image of God..." (Wyndham, 15).	"[Offences shall] be destroyed..." (Wyndham, 13).
He had pledged to remove all the mutants of the world.	The town had cheered Joseph for his dedication and bravery.	Joseph had felt proud.
"[Joseph will] be [going] to exterminate us..." (Wyndham, 48).	[Joseph], appeared to have been a man of somewhat tediously unrelieved virtue" (Wyndham, 5)	"It is everybody's duty to report any kind of Offence to me – even if they aren't sure – so that I can decide" (Wyndham, 20)

Joseph loved to punish the immoral.

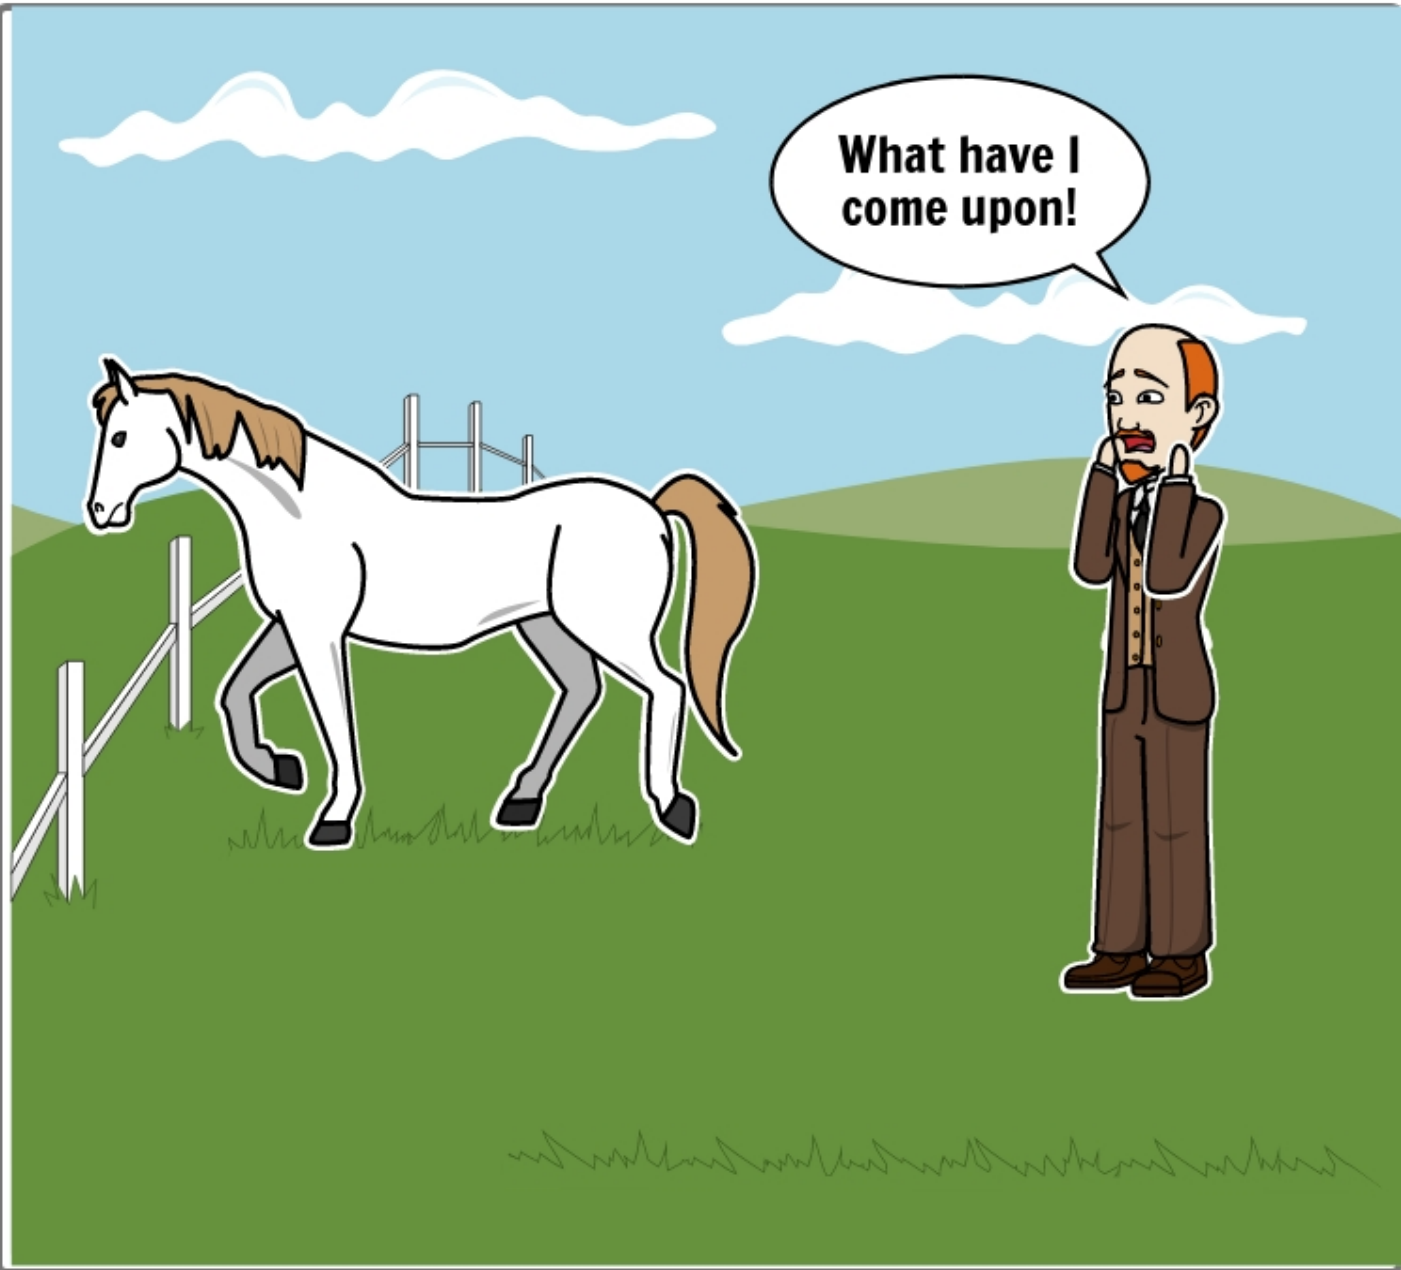

"[Joseph] was a man of local consequence" (Wyndham, 6).

He destroyed any mutant that came in his way.

"Offences [are] blasphemies" (Wyndham,6).

One day, he came upon a mutated horse.

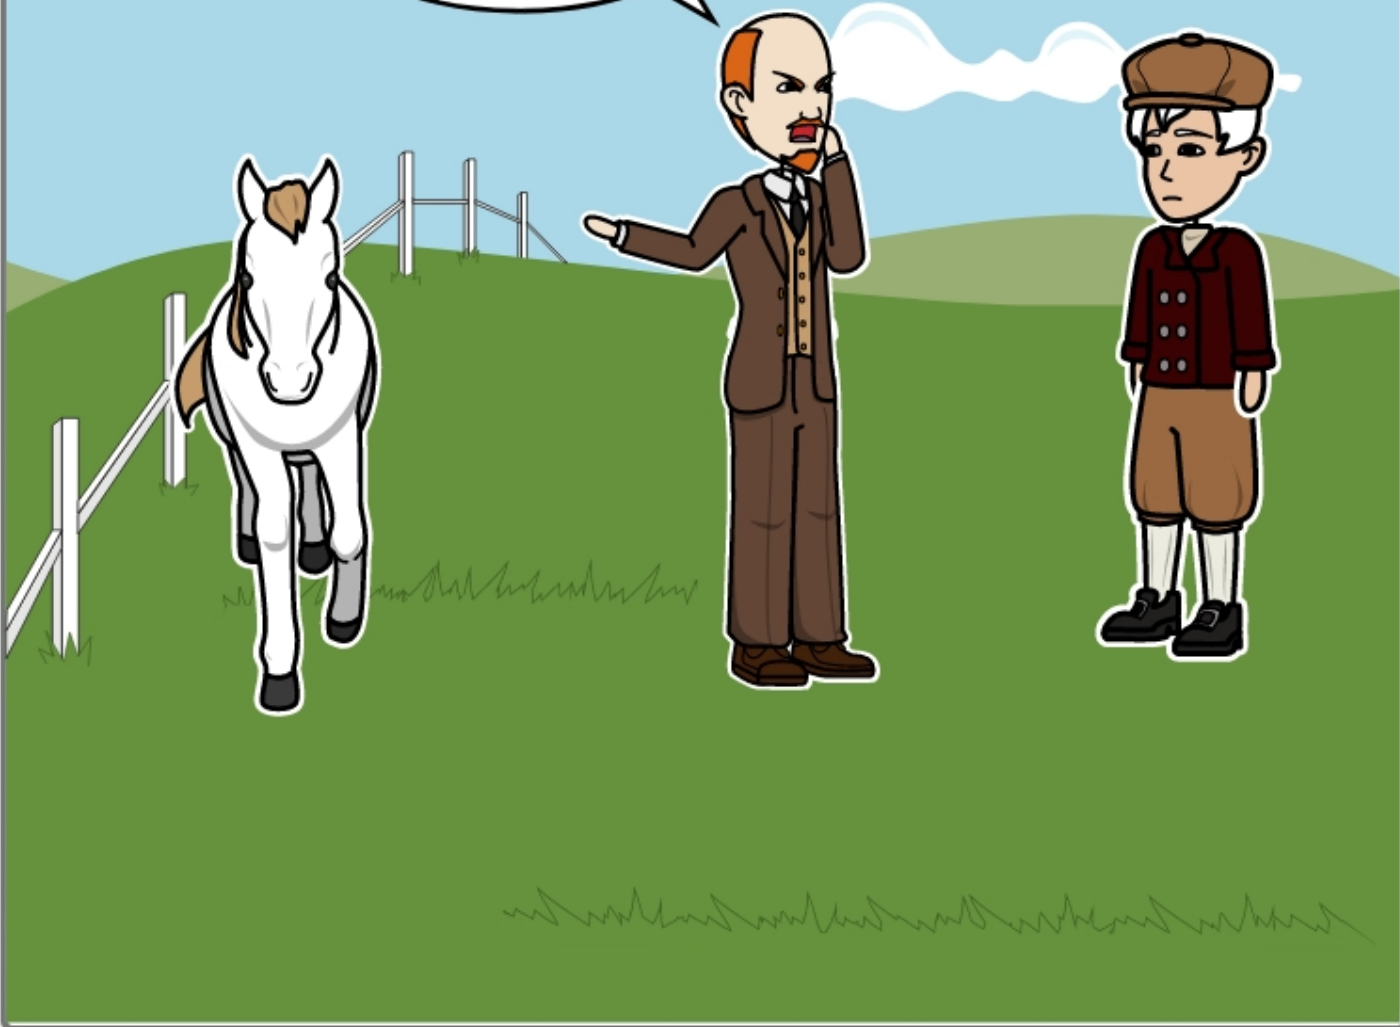

"God never made horses the size of these" (Wyndham, 13)

Joseph argued that the horses should not be put to use.

How could you allow such an atrocitiy!

It's just a tall horse.

"[Who] could pass creatures like that..." (Wyndham, 14).

From that moment, Joseph disagreed with anyone who ought to believe that mutants should live.

You shall stay until you have been banished.

Let me out!

"Regain the high place in which, as the image of God..." (Wyndham, 15).

Joseph became... the Annihilator

"[Offences shall] be destroyed..." (Wyndham, 13).

He had pledged to remove all the mutants of the world.

"[Joseph will] be [going] to exterminate us..." (Wyndham, 48).

The town had cheered Joseph for his dedication and bravery.

Marry me Joseph!

Way to go, Joseph.

[Joseph], appeared to have been a man of somewhat tediously unrelieved virtue" (Wyndham, 5)

Joseph had felt proud.

"It is everybody's duty to report any kind of Offence to me – even if they aren't sure – so that I can decide" (Wyndham, 20)