Self-Reflection

In math, I worked on a project about exponents. In this project, I further developed my analytical skills. I had to answer several questions related to exponents. I reviewed and analyzed what I knew about exponents from school as well as from extracurricular classes and provided general answers to each question. I avoided using specific examples to explain the general ideas. However, I used my creative thinking skills to come up with examples that best supported my explanations and conclusions. As part of the project, I had to read and evaluate a partner's post about exponents. I had to analyze their information to make sure all questions had been addressed completely. I also had to post a comment and communicate my findings in a positive way: if there were any mistakes, what was done best, and if there was anything that can be improved. As a whole, I think that I have completed both tasks very well.
