Self-Reflection

In math, we had a project where we created our name on Desmos which is an online graphing calculator. This project required me to use many different types of functions like linear, constant, and exponential. During this assignment, I used my critical and creative thinking skills. It was a challenge for me when I was shading the star. I used my critical thinking to problem solve that challenge. I looked at my previous attempts to see where I was making mistakes. I used my creative skills to approach the problem in a different way and was able to find a solution. I also used my creative skills when I was designing the letters of my name like the cursive "L". I used lots of different types of functions combined together to achieve the design I wanted. Overall, this project was very interesting. It helped me practice using functions in different ways which added to the development of my critical and creative thinking skills.
