What is Public Broadcasting?

Public Broadcasting is a primary and public service, it is spread on radios, television and other media outlets.

Public broadcasting can vary from different topics whether it is covering the news, sports, or talking about people on the run way. It is used to keep a country connected and informed.

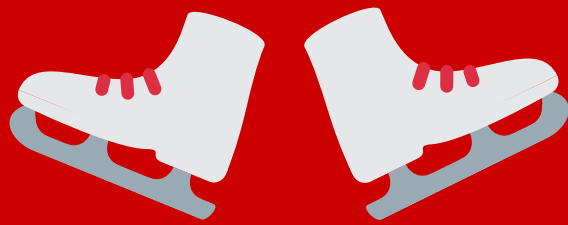

What is Canada's broadcast network?

Canada has its own public broadcast network, called CBC which was founded in 1936 in Ottawa.

CBC is Canada's primary source for local and country wide news and media updates.

What are benefits of public broadcasting?

Public broadcasting has many benefits to citizens. In some countries in the world, the media is biased and content is controlled by the government.

In Canada we have media freedom and CBC provides unbiased information on local topics and also provides hundreds of shows ranging from comedies to drama shows.
