How did your thinking change throughout this unit about myths and misconceptions?

I think that this unit of exploring the different mythes and misconceptions of french immersion that my thinking was definitely shifted in the sense that it opened by eyes as to how people that weren't in french immersion had thought about the program. I had learned that there was more negative and false stereotypes about french immersion than I had originally thought. As false as these perceptions are about our program, I expect it to change over the next years because of how useful it's become for jobs and future careers to learn a new language. My thinking was definitely changed throughout the unit as well because I didn't know too much about how people thought about the program; I was more focused on being in the program that I never thought about what others thought, and so this was definitely more eye-opening because I was able to discover and explore the different perspectives from people all over the world.

Describe the role of French Immersion in your personal identity.

Over the years of joining the Immersion program, I definitely think that there has been an incorporation into my personal life and identity; I was able to create lots of different experiences through this program (a prime example would be visiting Quebec in Grade 7) and was able to meet a lot of new people in school through the program. French immersion has definitely had a more positive impact than negative; as hard as it is to learn a completely new language, I think that it's been for the better in lots of different aspects.
