Self-Reflection

Describe how the artifact you selected shows your strengths & growth in specific core competencies. The prompt questions on the left - or other self-assessment activities you may have done - may guide your reflection process.

In early March, I created an iPhone holder made of wood in woodworking which I then later laser burned a logo onto. I have selected the creative thinking and communication core competencies for this assignment. Communication was extremely important for this assignment for a couple reasons, including during the creating process. I had a few set backs when my wood piece split in two and when my own images wouldn't work on the laser burner. Through communicating with my teacher I was able to repair my piece and come up with a different way to use a unique logo on the laser burner. I also used the communication core competency during Covid-19 where we have had to stay home. I effectively communicated with my teacher to tell him where my holder was located in the school shop and what finishing steps I needed done to finish my project. Because I had to explain this all virtually, it was extremely important that I gave very clear directions and detailed answers.

The other core competency I selected for this assignment is Creative Thinking. When we were given this assignment it was a standard shape and style so to add your own type of personality you needed to be creative. Originally I had planned to use an image that I had taken in real life and then burn it onto my piece, but then I later found out I couldn't use my image, so I decided to use a symbol that is very important to me. To add a creative touch to my piece, I decided to also add a bit of paint. Throughout the challenges and special circumstances of this assignment I still really enjoyed getting to learn new techniques in woodworking.
