people base their preference of clothing/outfits of theirs and others on trends and what most people find attracting.

I've always found this "imitating."

Most people tend to bring down other people by commenting on what they would/like to wear just because it's not "trending" and because not everyone wears it.

I have read comments and opinions on clothing lines by high-end luxurious brands like Balenciaga and Gucci, and I read a lot of comments, saying that it was "ugly" and "nerd"

This really proves that all clothing and fashion in general isn't all considered as art.

art carries meaningful messages and emotionally "moves" us.

ideas - helmet no need for assistance if greedy enough.

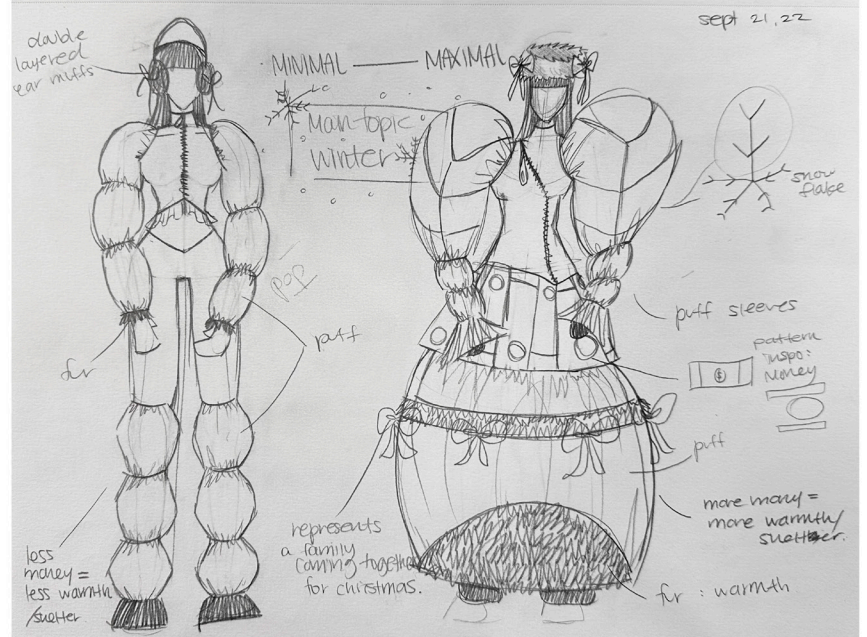

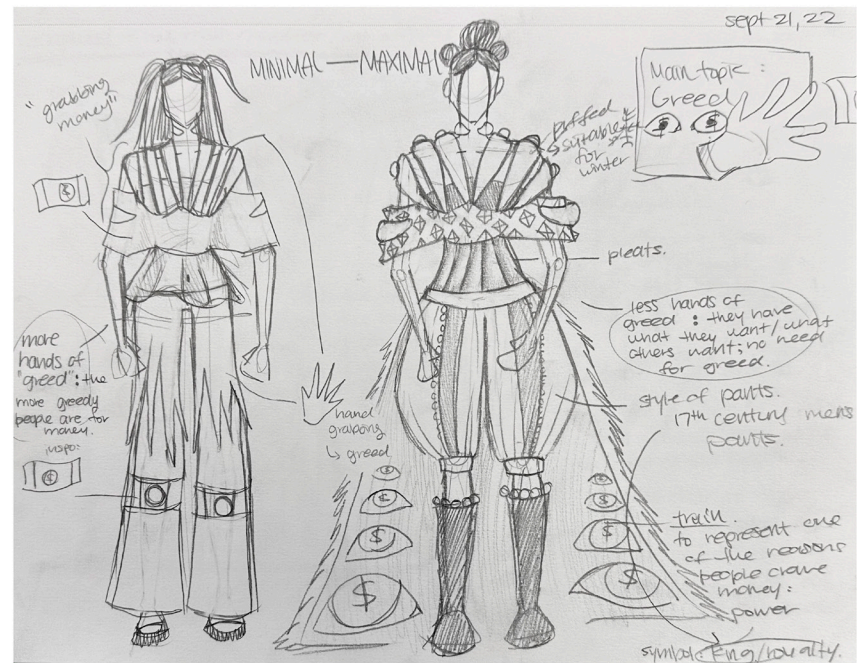

"good outfit"

"nerd fashion"
