Self-Reflection

I chose communication as the core competency will write about for my self reflection because I think that communication played a very big role in my Everything I Know About Exponents blog post. One way that I used communication was that my partner Sam and I frequently messaged each other to see how we were doing with our post and if there was any way that we could help each other. Once I was done with my post, Sam and I commented on each other's posts to give ourselves constructive criticism on how we can improve our blog post and if there were any mathematical errors we made. That is a big part of the communication competency "Connect and engage with others" because I communicated with more people then just Sam encase, I did not understand a question, or if somebody didn't message me back, I would try to message someone else. I did this because I wanted to make sure I knew what I was doing and that I was not doing anything incorrect that I could have potentially misunderstood. I also "Acquired, interpreted and presented information" because showed my blog post to partner Sam after I corrected it from my teacher's corrections to see if Sam thought that it was improved or if that I properly changed the things Ms. Hubbard told my to change. This means that I acquired information on how to change my post, then I explained to Sam what I changed and presented the changes to him. Another reason why I chose communication is because I did the third point which is "Collaborate to plan, carry out, and review constructions and activities". I properly planned my free time and devoted it for completing the blog post, I looked over the instructions for the post and my post's comments to make sure everything was properly put into place. I think that I accomplished my goals for this project which were that I would be happy with my finished work and that I put great effort into making this blog post. I think I worked hard and had various core competencies for communication involved with the way I worked on this project.
